

WIDELY KNOWN FRANKFORT VETERINARIAN DIES

MARLEY AND HOMER CHURCHES TO UNITE IN MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAMABOUT THIS — AND —
ABOUT THAT

By OLIVER GEDEIST

PLAIN GOOFY—There's much go-fy talk about representatives in legislatures voting in accord with their constituents' wishes. Poppycock! What we need is representatives who will think straight and vote for measures for the benefit of ALL THE PEOPLE without caring a whoop whether individuals like it or not.

SIN ON PUBLIC.—Weak sisters wanting to continue in office, trying to satisfy divergent elements in districts by their votes, commit a sin upon the public welfare. The great stalwarts of American public life have been men who LED public opinion and voted accordingly. They held the respect of voters—and remained in office longer than the pussy-footers will hold office.

TWO-TERM LIMIT.—States are slow in ratifying two-term limit for presidents of the United States. That's bad. The danger is not so much in the average man elevated to the presidency; the danger is in the political organization built up under long tenure—and in the natural human desire to protect a job. Political hierarchies are dangerous to everybody, including the beneficiaries.

NEWS, ALWAYS.—Life's never dull for whoever follows the news. As an example, falling steel rod penetrated man's head on New York street. Rod too long for man and bar to get in ambulance. Police held rod while pipe-cutter cut off rod. Then to the hospital. Man may live. Bad news for the man and his family. Reminds us that none is safe any time, anywhere.

DEATH TIME.—Spring, nice weather—death time. Devils in human form indifferent to human safety dash along highways and town and village streets in utter disregard for children, old people, and others. Show-offs, they are. Yes, there'll be lots of dying in the next few months. Watch your children! Skulking drivers won't watch them. What to them is a mere little dead body, the flower of a family's heart? Good hunting to policemen! May judges be merciless!

WHY?—Ever ask why so many people are so careless of the rights and lives of other people? Psychologists claim it is because in the home the proper respect is not paid to each other's rights—that it is neglect in education, first in the home, then in the church, then in schools. Decide for yourself. But for the protection of your own and others' lives, do something about it. Or, don't you care?

WEATHER.—Of course, it's always with us. But it doesn't have to be so ornery—or does it? First floods of rains, then, when we expect blossoms to sing their cheery songs of beauty to the soft warmth of spring—bang! and comes winter freezing. When we strut in our new clothes, think we are pretty nifty, get a big head about our prowess, let's try to fix the weather—and see if we're so smart.

SHAME!—It won't do any good now, of course, but one of those "slips" occurred last week to make a lot of folks mad at the Editor. Mokena firemen ordered an advertisement in the paper telling of a grand Saturday night dance and card party—and, well, fine party. And I forgot about it. But those firemen couldn't be stopped. Already they'd done a fine lot of publicity, including a newspaper story—they went right out and broadcast the advertisement that we should have run. We hang our head in shame, although that does not help the firemen, nor pay our expenses.

GREEN THINGS.—Happy are we that our disappointments do not stay overlong. Amid all troubles there are comforting beauties. Soon the fields will be glorified with little green shoots a-come-up; children, on vacation, laughing merrily as they play or work—and both are good for children. Butterflies in gorgeous colors, colorful birds, roses—life's full of beauty if we want to see it.

MISS SPROAT ON FIELD TRIP

Miss Lois Sproat, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Sproat, Maple road, made a field trip last week with 45 other students in the criminology class of the University of Illinois.

Last semester Lois was house president of Menominee manor, an independent girls' house on campus and vice-president last year.

She will graduate this June with a bachelor of arts degree from the school of liberal arts and science, majoring in sociology.

Oak Forest Incorporates

OAK FOREST.—(Special)—Oak Forest last Saturday voted to incorporate. A surprisingly large vote was cast and the decision was close. The results of the election were given as:

For	307
Against	284
Spoiled	11

Total

The large vote was a surprise to both sides, since a total of approximately 500 votes would have been considered good.

Much publicity was given to the program to incorporate and active opposition had not been much in evidence. Workers were at the polls early and worked throughout the day, and it was reported, one resident living outside of the area to be incorporated used his car to take opposition voters to the polls.

Members of the Citizens committee, which spearheaded the move to incorporate, expressed appreciation for the excellent support received by voters.

Art Cameron, of the Cameron-Walker Lumber company, made a statement in which he said in part: "It is gratifying, of course, that supporters of incorporation were successful. The committee had as its only purpose bringing to Oak Forest the home rule to which it is entitled, improving conditions in our community, achieving adequate protection for our homes and families. As far as I know," Mr. Cameron went on, "there are no animosities. Some of us were in favor and some were not. Each expressed his or her conviction at the polls. Now we will all work together for the good of Oak Forest, and I am sure there is no selfishness on either side."

R. A. Gustafson, chairman of the Citizens committee, was happy, he said, at the outcome. "Those who disagreed with incorporation," he said, "had every right to express their views by voting to suit themselves. That's democracy in action. Now, in the same way, we will all work to make Oak Forest an even better place for our homes and families."

Cook County Judge Jarecki Thursday approved the findings of the election board, it was stated, and it is expected that soon a date will be set for the election of village officials.

Book Club List

(Here is continued the list of books of the Mokena Book Club available through the club library open Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday evening each week in village hall.)

"Black Rose" by Thomas Costain—Romantic tale of 13th century England and the Orient. The hero, Walter of Gurnie, illegitimate son of an earl, leaves Oxford to travel in the East after the death of his father. He rescues a beautiful Greek girl, marries her, then loses her, and has some fabulous adventures in the land of Kubla Kahn, before he returns to England.

"Blessed are the Meek" by Zofia Kossak—Zofia Kossak is an historical novelist of distinction. She distills the essence of elaborate and careful historical research into a fanciful and reflective novel which revivifies the early 13th century with all its religious wars and spectacular conflicts.

"Canal Town" by Samuel Hopkins Adams.

"Cass Timberlane" by Sinclair Lewis—Cass Timberlane, at 41, was sober, thoughtful, and respected by the Minnesota town in which he was a judge. This story of Cass' second marriage to a girl in her early twenties is punctuated by stories of the married lives of his friends.

"Crazy Weather" by C. L. McNichols—The crazy weather was a spell of Arizona heat, when the mercury stood at 114 degrees even in the morning. The American boy, called South Boy, was only 14; his father was in the north buying cattle; his mother, an invalid, was out on the Pacific Coast. So it was up to South Boy to look out for himself. During the four days of crazy weather, South Boy joined his Mohave Indian friend and went completely Indian for the time being. Then a rainstorm broke the heat wave; South Boy went home, realizing that in that time he had grown from boyhood to man's estate.

Mrs. C. Hick

Mrs. Caroline Hick (nee Knaack), formerly of Tinley Park, died Monday, May 12 at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Anna Klitte, in Salem, Wis. She was the mother of Fred Hick of Tinley Park.

Born in Germany January 11, 1866, she was married there, in 1884, to Henry Hick, and they came to the United States in 1892 with four children.

Mr. and Mrs. Hick lived in Chicago four years, then moved to near Tinley Park. Mr. Hick died in 1935. Three years ago Mrs. Hick went to live with Mrs. Klitte, then living in Kenosha, Wis.

For hundreds of years in Egypt, wages were payable in bread rather than coin or paper money.

Dr. John L. McEwan of Frankfort died at his home Thursday of last week. As a veterinarian Dr. McEwan was widely known throughout southern Cook county and all Will county.

In failing health for more than a year, Dr. McEwan was confined to his bed only a week before his death. He would have been 70 in August of this year.

Frankfort had been the home of Dr. McEwan for 37 years and he had practiced his profession in the surrounding communities through the years until his health forced his retirement last year.

He was born in Burlington August 12, 1877, and, following preliminary education, attended the Chicago Veterinary college, being presented with a bronze medal inscribed "best in final examinations." That was in surgery.

This honor was particularly significant, since the young student was compelled to work with only two fingers on his right hand.

Dr. McEwan was a state and federally accredited veterinarian.

In an interview with The Semmler Papers last year, Dr. McEwan recalled his experiences in the days of horse-and-buggy driving, when he would be away from home several days at a time, going from place to place and keeping informed of the next call through telephone calls to his home, "and," he recalled, "sometimes it was pretty tough going in bitter weather, getting stuck in snow banks." He welcomed the advent of automobiles and was quick to utilize the new motor vehicle in his work.

Dr. McEwan was a member of Blackberry Lodge 359, A. F. & A. M., of Elburn and of the Medinah Temple Shrine in Chicago.

Surviving are the widow, the former Jessie Bush; three brothers, L. A. McEwan of Iowa Falls, Iowa; Joseph McEwan of Maple Park, and Dr. Harry L. McEwan of Elburn; and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Wesemann of Hampshire and Mrs. Anna Keeney of Rockton.

A brief service was held in the home Monday night by the Rev. Lloyd Coleman, pastor of Frankfort Methodist church, who also officiated at funeral services held at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon at the West End funeral home, Chicago Heights.

The funeral party left immediately after the service for Elgin, where interment was made in Bluff City cemetery, with Masonic funeral honors.

Surviving are the widow, Minnie Fiedler Wachter; five daughters, Mrs. Marguerite Welch of Joliet and Mrs. Dorothy Rinke, Mrs. Frances Hall, Mrs. Madeline Barenz and Miss Evelyn, all of Mokena and two sons, Carl and Edward of Chicago.

Funeral services were held at 10 o'clock this morning in St. Martin's church, 59th and Princeton, and burial was in St. Mary's cemetery in Chicago.

Please be prompt so as not to keep others waiting.

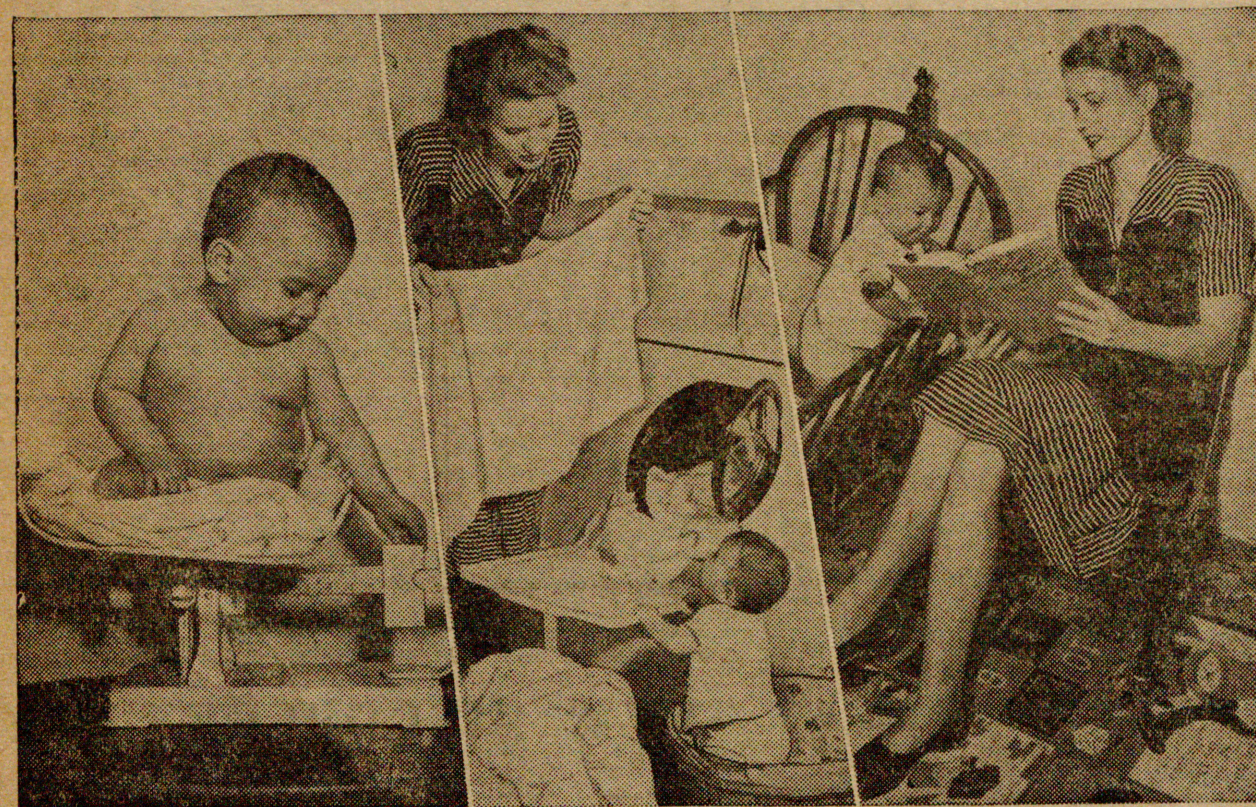

Tinley Firemen
Reelect Officers

Tinley Park's volunteer fire department reelected all officers at a meeting in village hall Tuesday evening of last week. At the meeting a representative of a fire-fighting equipment manufacturer presented the merits of new equipment.

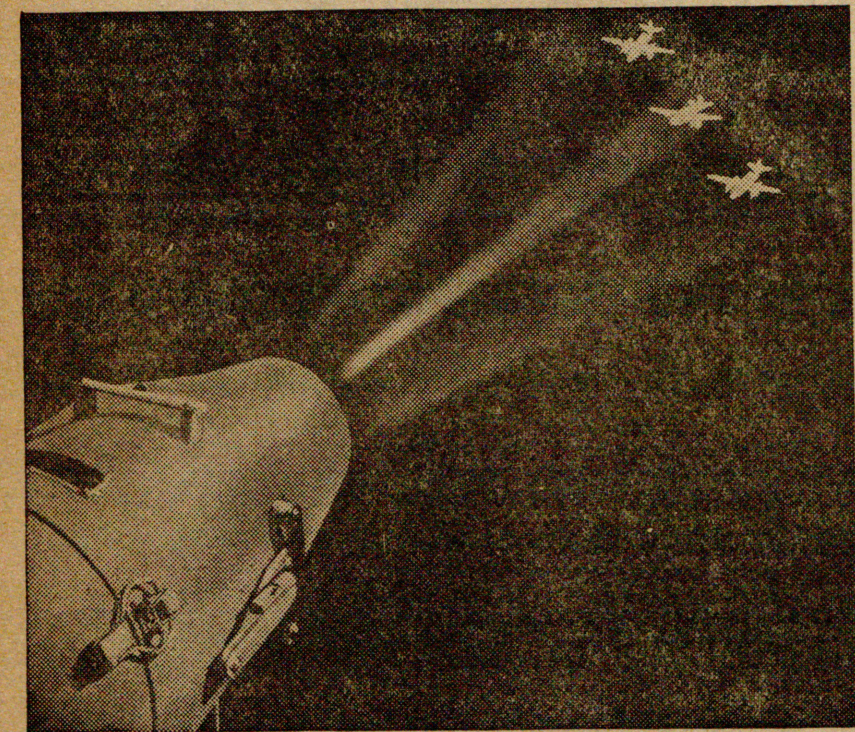

Officers continued in their positions were Chief Edmund Moss, Assistant Chief James C. English, Secretary John Funk, Treasurer Fred Goebel.

THE WORLD OF TOMORROW . . . Futuristic designer of transportation, Arthur Radebaugh of Detroit's New Center studios has his own idea of what transportation will become in the years to come. His ideas are shown in drawings depicting air, water and land transportation of the future. Radebaugh has worked for air lines, automobile companies and railroads—is admitted to be ahead of 1948 models in all three fields.

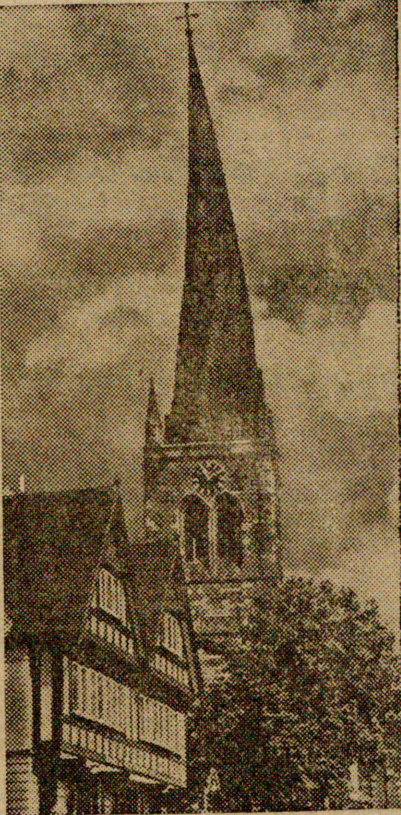

PATSY GOES TO COLLEGE . . . When Patsy, 10 months old, first entered the home management house of University of New Mexico, she was retarded mentally, suffered from a skin rash and was in such a complicated emotional state that medical science seemed stumped. Within two months, under the care of students in domestic science, she was ready to "graduate" with honors. The girls majoring in home economics bathe, feed and rock Patsy to sleep.

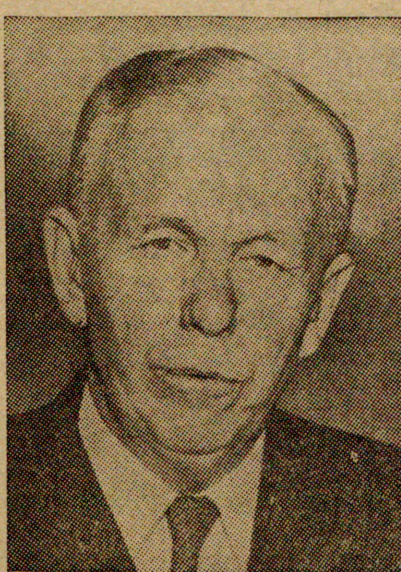

AID TO CORRECT LANDING . . . Two approach angle indicators like this one will be used in the all-weather approach light system to train pilots in correct landing procedures. The pilot in the middle plane is coming in at correct rate of descent and would see a green light. The light would appear as red to the lower plane, which is too low. Installed near the head of the runway, approach angle indicators will be used only in relatively clear weather. They are expected to accustom pilots to correct landings and help make foggy weather operations routine. This device will eliminate many of the landing accidents that have occurred during the past few years. The army and navy have approved of the indicator.

DETROIT LABOR PROTESTS . . . An estimated 100,000 workers marched to Cadillac square in Detroit to attend a five hour protest meeting against labor bills in congress. Several major Detroit automobile factories were forced to suspend operation for the day as thousands of workers jammed the city hall area in protest. This demonstration was typical of many others held in various parts of the country against representatives in congress who favored anti-labor laws.

CROOKED SPIRE . . . The famous crooked spire of the parish church, Chesterfield, England. The spire is twisted owing to the warping of the timbers beneath a leaden covering. It is 230 feet high, 8 feet out of perpendicular.

REPORTING . . . George C. Marshall, secretary of state, as he reported to the nation from Washington on the "Big Four" conference. Marshall laid blame for the failure of the conference at Russia's door, but said Marshal Stalin had hopes.

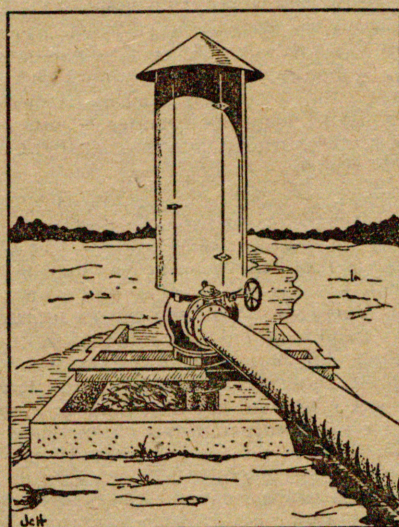

Hydro-Electric on Farms Fills Needs

Serves as Substitute Central Power Service

Despite the progress made by power suppliers in "electrifying rural America," the task is so vast that thousands of farms will not be reached by electric lines for several years. A number of these farms are located far from existing or contemplated distribution lines.

Farmers need not have to delay or do without electricity and the convenience, time and labor-saving appliances and production equipment it operates—if they have available a stream which will provide a head of water in sufficient volume to operate a hydro-electric unit. In most cases, a small dam is required and a pond, thus formed for power purposes, also may be used for watering stock, fire protection or recreation. Such units are capable of producing direct or alternating electric current at low cost and make use of water which might otherwise be wasted.

1 K.W. unit on a ranch in Montana.

The electrical capacity of units, such as that illustrated, varies from ½ to 10 kilowatts. For example: A typical unit will generate one kilowatt, with an eight-foot head of water, having a flow of 190 cubic feet of water per minute. As the head of water increases, the volume required decreases for the operation of a generator of given capacity. Thus, with a head of 25 feet, a hydro-electric unit will generate one kilowatt with a volume flow of only 68 cubic feet of water per minute. An eight-foot head is all that is needed for those generating from one-half to five kilowatts.

Fungicides Tested By Vegetable Mice

Scales of Easter lily bulbs are very subject to attack by a fungus causing scale rot, which accounts for their adoption by Drs. W. D. McClellan and N. W. Stuart, U.S.D.A. agricultural research division, in determining the effectiveness of various fungicides at the Beltsville station.

One fact that makes these "vegetable mice" particularly useful in testing work is that all the scales from one bulb are genetically the same, and for that reason the vulnerability to attack of the rot is uniform.

Some other advantages of this new method are that the scales can be used at any time of the year if properly handled, the effect of the disease attack on the scales can be read with ease because they are smooth and almost white, the chemical to be tested can be applied as dust and in a suspension or solution, the equipment is simple and takes little space.

Chick Glands Bigger When Fed Thioracil

Studies at Purdue experiment station have shown that a new drug, thioracil, when fed to chickens at a level of 0.2 per cent, resulted in marked changes in the thyroid gland and increased the rate of fattening. When the drug was fed to breeding hens, the thyroids of newly-hatched chicks were greatly enlarged. The hatchability of the eggs showed no change and the chicks appeared to be of normal vigor.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Housing Trainees

Veterans administration and school authorities of the nation are wondering just how they are to house and provide facilities for veterans who have applied for education and training under the benefits of the two federal laws.

With schools and housing facilities already jammed to overflowing by 1,884,000 veterans enrolled in more than 25,000 U. S. and foreign educational institutions, and with almost 720,000 taking on the job training in more than 365,000 training establishments, applications for education and training have reached the unprecedented figure of more than 6,000,000 leaving 3,496,000 veterans to be housed and enrolled in the already crowded schools and training centers. Just how it can be accomplished has not been worked out.

Of course, there are veterans dropping out of school each year for, as of the first of this year, an estimated 835,000 had completed or discontinued their courses of education or training. But the majority of the remaining veterans who have applied for education and training and have received their VA certificates of eligibility have not yet entered training or educational courses.

The six million figure is almost half of the 14,447,000 veterans of World War II.

To J. N. W., Risco, Mo.—This column has received your original honorable discharge papers together with an application for a correspondence course. However, there was no letter accompanying the discharge certificate, so we are at a loss as to your question. We will return the discharge paper for it is valuable to you.—The Editor.

Questions and Answers

Q. I am an ex-G.I. and although I have tried consistently to get a G.I. loan for a home, I have been unable to do so. I know of other men who are in the same boat as I. They just don't make them. What's the matter? Is the law no good, or are the G.I.s who fought a war to save their security a bad risk for these bankers?—B. L. D., Jefferson City, Mo.

A. The law is a liberal law with the government guaranteeing up to 50 per cent of a loan of $4,000 for a home. As for the G.I. being a good risk, Veterans' administration says that in the case of home loans, as of March 25, 1947, they had approved for guaranty 643,000 home loans with a face value of $3,642,000,000 carrying government guarantee commitments of $1,707,000,000. As of the same date, claims against the guaranty had been made by lenders in only 212 home loan cases and 42 of these were subsequently withdrawn. Of the remaining 135 cases, claims in the amount of $245,400 have been paid and this amount will be reduced by further recovery through liquidation of security of the loans. So while this infinitesimally small number of defaults may not reflect accurately the long-term trend, for the loans are made up for periods up to 25 years, the experience to date is that ex-G.I.s are an exceedingly good loan risk. On farm loans, a total of 26,700 has been made and only 68 defaulted. On business loans, 59,450 have been approved and 732 have been defaulted.

Q. My son, Pfc. L. C. F., was supposed to get his discharge around December 12, 1946, and it is now April, 1947, and he still has not received his papers. The last time he talked to the officials they claimed they were trying to trace his papers but couldn't give him another discharge paper. Why not? As the boy will need it very much in the years to come, please see if you can not do something towards getting him a copy of his discharge papers.—Mrs. R. H. F., Kaycee, Wyo.

A. Apparently your son's papers have been lost or mislaid and his service record has been forwarded by the separation center to the demobilized personnel record branch, office of the adjutant general, 4300 Goodfellow Blvd., St. Louis 20, Mo. So if the local separation center can give you no information, write to this address and explain the situation to them. They will send you a form, likely for identification purposes, and then will send you duplicate papers.

Q. Can you tell me what Sec. X-AR 615-360, WD 395 stands for on my discharge?—L. L. D., Oxford, Miss.

A. Army regulation 615-360 is a section of the military code governing discharges generally and covers all releases from active duty. With reference to war department circular 395, we must have the year in order to determine its reference since each year the circulars start with No. 1 and run through the year. No doubt the WD 395 order is of a general nature, giving authority for the type of discharged received by you.

The Rustler Was a Gentleman

By COLE RICHARDS

THE riders, three men and a girl, burst from Ladrino Canyon like bullets fired into the dawn. Spurs flashing, whirlwinds rising from the hoofs of the straining horses, they pelted down on Kansas Terry. The girl was Toni Lee; the men, her foreman, Chuck Mayne, and her cowboys, Slat and Jimmy Gwinn.

"Outa all New Mexico," the burly Mayne thought, exultantly, "we picked that there canyon to ride through. And here's our rustler, with a dead calf."

His exultation was tinged with discomfort. Embarrassing, having a lady with them; he could only hope the men, on both sides, would gloss things over, sort of.

Kansas Terry, the rustler, could have grabbed his pack pony's lead-rope and vaulted into his saddle. He could have got away through the high greasewood, but he did not.

He bent over the dead roan calf. The nickel conchos on his leather roping guard flashed with the swift turns of his wrist. He wiped and sheathed his bowie knife. Tall, lanky, easy in manner, he stood with his back to the party riding toward him.

The riders circled him at the gallop, pulling the ponies to their haunches in sudden stop.

Kansas Terry's brown Stetson was shoved back, disclosing his pale eyes, with their sly, mocking expression. He smiled sweetly, "Mornin', Miss Toni. Mornin', Chuck. Mornin', Slat. Mornin', Jimmy." Addressing the girl, he bowed from the hips. Kansas Terry's good manners never failed him.

Chuck Mayne's bushy brows met over his rugged face like storm clouds over the Bad Lands. "We got yuh this time, Kansas."

"Now Ah wouldn't say so," Kansas Terry drawled, gently.

Chuck Mayne felt uneasy. There was something about the mockery in Kansas Terry's pale eyes, something about the extra silk on his politeness, that said he wasn't caught by a long way.

Toni Lee drew her fingers across her eyes as if a mist gathered there. A slim girl, with wide-set eyes, gentility showed on her as plainly as the silver bracelets on her brown wrists.

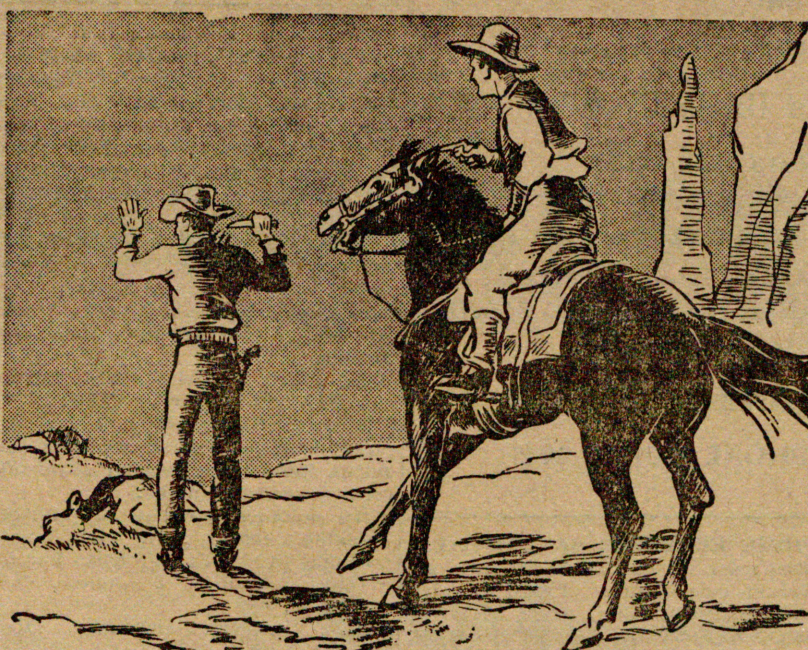

"That there," Mayne asserted, "is a calf out'n Miss Toni's herd."

"That there," Terry returned, coolly and impersonally. He appeared to find nothing wrong with them. His finger touched his throat, above the knotted red bandanna, as if a hemp noose rasped the flesh.

The gesture made Mayne's hopes rise, but they thudded down when Terry folded his arms and stood at ease.

Muttering, "We'll find that brand," Mayne hurled himself into the search. He drove on Slat and Jimmy with a fury of energy.

A sweating trio of men worked over the desert around the calf. They looked into mesquite and snarled cactus and prickly pear. They investigated four prairie dog

He rode up close and whipped the rustler's gun from the holster. "Stretch them red hands, high, mister."

"Regular cactus of a guy, ain't yuh?" he drawled, amiably. "Sharp and hard to grab." His own bowie flashed. He cut a similar square of hide from the roan flank. "This what you done?" Mayne hurled the soggy rawhide as far as he could. "Git it, Slat."

Slat transferred the lead horses to Toni Lee. Touching spur to his pinto, he scooted to the piece of rawhide. Arriving there, he made a slow circle, and other circles inside that. Slat could pick up a trail with any Indian. If the brand had been thrown he would have found it.

"Nope," he said, at last. "Twasn't thrown."

Jimmy, dangling his loop, looked from the cottonwood in the canyon to the lanky, confident rustler. He shook his head. "Once a rustler cut a brand, that's that. He stuff it down a prairie dog hole."

"I heard," Slat put in languidly, "of one jammin' a piece of hide down a calf's throat."

"Look for it!" Mayne ordered. "Doggone it we caught this rascal redhanded."

Kansas Terry looked at his hands, coolly and impersonally. He appeared to find nothing wrong with them. His finger touched his throat, above the knotted red bandanna, as if a hemp noose rasped the flesh.

The gesture made Mayne's hopes rise, but they thudded down when Terry folded his arms and stood at ease.

Muttering, "We'll find that brand," Mayne hurled himself into the search. He drove on Slat and Jimmy with a fury of energy.

A sweating trio of men worked over the desert around the calf. They looked into mesquite and snarled cactus and prickly pear. They investigated four prairie dog holes, a badger hole and the throat of the calf.

"So th' calf ain't branded," Mayne said reluctantly. "Th' brand wasn't thrown, wasn't stuffed nowhere, and it sure ain't on yore person, or the blood 'ud give yuh away. But some day I'll git yuh agin."

Kansas Terry smiled sweetly. "Ah'll be at yore service," he said, courteously, without a trace of gloating. "Goodbye, Miss Toni. Goodbye, Chuck. Goodbye, Slat. Goodbye, Jimmy." Addressing the girl, he bowed.

"Yuh got doggone good manners," Mayne scowled, "but yore a rustler, jest th' same."

THE four riders made a cloud of dust along the escarpment. Kansas Terry stood motionless, watching them. The riders vanished up a draw, but Terry stood immovable. He stared at the emptiness they left on the plain, for a long, long time. Once he readjusted the bandanna, and his fingers slid gingerly along his neck. His hand found the bowie knife, but left it in the sheath.

The sun rose until the heat washed all the pale green and orange from the sky, leaving it a brazen blue. Terry's sorrel and the black pack-pony grazed farther and farther away. Still the rustler did not move, beyond shifting his feet to ease them, and rolling a cigarette.

At last he drew the bowie and took one step toward the calf.

He tensed, sprang back, reached for his gun.

Mayne, riding alone from the canyon, shouted, "Jimmy's got a rifle on yuh, Kansas! Don't move!" He rode up close and whipped the rustler's gun from the holster. "Stretch them red hands, high, mister."

"Matters stand jest as they did, Chuck."

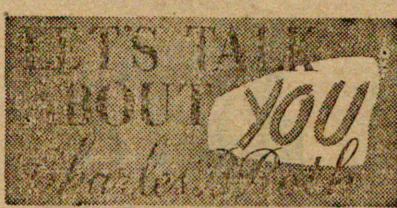

"Sho' don't I know it? Me an' Jimmy's been a-watchin' yuh, while Slat got Toni away. Didn't want her to see yuh caught an' hung."

"Thank yuh, suh," Terry said, sincerely. "But the brand still ain't in evidence."

"No, but I got to thinkin' after I left yuh."

Mayne shoved the gun muzzle under the brim of Terry's brown Stetson, and lifted the hat. Terry's curly hair had a strange tansure—a square of roan calf hide.

"Figured it thataway," Mayne said softly. "Yuh got too good manners, Kansas, to stand in front of a lady with yore hat on."

YOU MIGHT BE A NAGGER

The husband was up for striking his wife. He had no defense except that she nagged him continuously. But in the eyes of the judge that was sufficient, for he said, in acquitting the husband, "There's nothing worse in this world than a nagging person."

Note that he said "person," not "woman," for it is a fact that just as many men as women nag—and both men and women, when they nag, put big boulders in the path of their life.

Maybe you know naggers and wonder why they nag. It's a curious and interesting reason. Naggers nag because they are dissatisfied with their own existence, and want to make others dissatisfied. That is one reason. Another is that they are jealous. A third is that the nagger is simply a selfish, spoiled person.

The worse thing about nagging, however, is that many persons are naggers without knowing it.

Keep a record for two or three days, and if you find a querulous note in your actions or words, a tendency to like to tell others what to do, you're a nagger.

And then you have to take the treatment. The treatment consists of one word—STOP. If you want others to like you, if you want to make the most out of every day of your life, don't develop the habits of a nagger.

GOD IN NATIONAL AFFAIRS

LESSON TEXT—Amos 5:6-15, 21-24.
MEMORY SELECTION—Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live.—Amos 5:14.

Social justice, though much spoken about in recent times, has been the concern of right thinking men ever since sin entered the world and started man's inhumanity toward man. In the prophet Amos we find the eloquent and plain-spoken voice of one crying out against such conditions almost 800 years before Christ.

"This lesson is one which is of utmost importance, because in our present-day struggle with social injustice we have come to assume that it is primarily a political or economic question.

The book of Amos and all other scripture rightly gets at "the focus of infection," which is sin. Sin in the heart leads to sinful actions, and these inevitably involve others, and thus bring about social problems.

I. God Is Great and Just (vv. 6-9).

From the little village of Tekoa and out of the wilderness in which he had been a herdsman came Amos, the man of God, to hurl his prophecy of disaster upon the heads of the complacent people of Israel and to take up a lamentation over those in Israel living in luxury and prosperity.

It was true that the common people were being ground under the heel of cruel oppression, but who cared about the poor as long as they could be squeezed for taxes to support the luxurious comforts and pleasures of the rich? A prosperity which does not reach the homes of the poor is not a real prosperity at all. When in addition it encourages the "haves" to oppress the "have-nots" it becomes a grave danger, a real cause for lamentation.

Over against the social sin and sorrow of his day Amos placed the almighty and righteous God. The people were urged to seek him and his righteousness. Would they do it? The answer came quickly.

II. Men Are Small and Wicked (vv. 10-13).

Thank God that it is not true of all men, but those of Amos' day (and many are like them in our day) turned away in hatred of the one who dared to rebuke their wickedness.

Sin is always a horrible thing, but when men who have fallen into sin are responsive to correction and ready to repent and forsake their sin, there is hope. The thing which made Israel's state so serious in the sight of God and of his prophet was that they had only hatred for those who were bold enough to reprove them or to live among them according to God's standards (vv. 10, 13).

"They who will endure no criticism have slammed the door in the face of truth. When we get to the place where we cannot endure having our faults pointed out, we are on the way to moral collapse" (Douglass).

III. Men Should Hate Evil (vv. 14, 15).

God loves the sinner, even when he is in his sin. God wants to help him, and so pleads with him to hate the evil enough to forsake it, and love the good enough to turn to God in repentance.

God's Word condemns sin, but it also presents a remedy. In Christ we have the perfect, final, and complete answer to the sin question. Amos, speaking centuries before Christ, admonished Israel to repent and to turn away from the evil which they had cultivated with such assiduity, and to be equally zealous about doing good, in the hope that "it may be that the Lord God of hosts will be gracious" (v. 15).

How favored we are to be permitted not only to urge people to turn from evil to good, but to offer them the One who is the way, the truth, and the life.

Israel did not repent, but in folly depended on their religious ceremonies to satisfy an offended God. The prophet therefore declares that

IV. God Hates Hypocrisy (vv. 21-24).

God had no pleasure in their religious observances and rites, because they were presented with unrepentant hearts and by hands which were soiled by the oppression of their fellow man.

Mark it well, God has no delight in the attendance upon church services, beautiful though they may be; he does not listen to the sweet strains of sacred music, nor does he accept the rich "offerings" of those who live in unforsaken sin and who pay for magnificent church buildings and beautiful church services with money gotten by crooked dealings and social injustice.

God is righteous, and God's Word always cuts right through the hypocrisy of men. Let us heed the plea of Amos, that righteousness should run through our personal and national life "as a mighty stream," and then we shall be ready both as individuals and as a people to worship him aright.

That means enough circuits and outlets to take care of the electrical equipment you now have, plus what you hope to buy in the future.

Our Reader Service booklet No. 15 gives many other helpful facts about building and remodeling homes. Dozens of floor plans and photos! Send 25 cents (coin) for "Small Homes: Planning, Financing, Building" to Weekly Newspaper Service, 245 West 17th St., New York 11, N. Y. Print name, address, booklet title and No. 15.

Television Device Used to Check on Distant Boiler

The first industrial use of wired television is in a device installed recently in a New York power plant. It enables the engineers to see and check, on a screen in the control room, the water level of a boiler in another building, through a television camera focused on its gauge.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

SCENIC WONDERLAND . . . Typical of the rugged and awe-inspiring beauty of the four national parks in the Rockies is this scene in Rocky Mountain National park in Colorado.

THE MAJESTIC ROCKIES

Chain of Parks Incorporates
Spectacular Mountain Scenery

WNU Features.

Towering peaks, deep, forest-clad canyons and lake-studded gorges combine to provide a spectacular and awe-inspiring wonderland in the Rocky mountains. Here, where the majesty of the mountains reaches its supreme heights, congress has established a chain of national parks, beginning with Yellowstone in 1872. These parks exemplify the many forms and possessing a distinctive character of its own.

Three of the parks—Glacier, Yellowstone and Rocky Mountain—bestride the Continental Divide so that the waters from their snowfields, lakes and streams drain into both the Atlantic and the Pacific. The fourth, Grand Teton, embracing the highest portion of the Tetons, drains into Snake river, a major tributary of the Columbia.

National Parks
Second
In a Series

GLACIER PARK, lying up against the Canadian border, and forming a part of Waterton-Glacier International Peace park, contains nearly a million acres of land and water. Although there are still some 60 glaciers, many of which the summer visitor can reach without great difficulty, it is the work of much greater glaciers of thousands of years ago which carved the many valleys of the park that are chiefly responsible for its name. In the valleys and basins so formed lie more than 200 lakes; these, reflecting the sheer peaks which rise from 3,000 to 5,000 feet above them, provide much of the spectacular beauty of the park that makes it one of the most photographed in the whole park system.

A highway crosses the park, by way of Logan pass on the Continental Divide, and short spur roads extend to several of the finest of the lakes. However, Glacier is primarily and most enjoyably a horse-back park. The National Park service calls it the foremost trail park as it contains about 1,000 miles of trails. The trails, rangers insist, provide the best means of really getting acquainted with the park. Glacier also stands next to Yellowstone in quantity and variety of big game, of which the mountain goat is probably the most famous species.

GRAND TETON, only a few miles south of Yellowstone, and flanked on the north and east by Jackson Hole National monument, is extraordinary both because of the jagged, rugged grandeur of its mountains and because of the fact that these rise abruptly from what geologists call the fault block trough of Jackson Hole. In other words, on their eastern side they have no foothills.

The tip of Grand Teton, with an elevation of 13,766 feet, is more than 7,000 feet above Jackson Hole and the lovely series of lakes—Jenny, String, Leigh, Jackson and others—that nestle against the base of the range. These mountains, too, owe much of their sculpture to glaciers, of which a few remain in the higher basins.

Packed within the 150-square mile area of alpine park are 22 peaks of more than 10,000-foot elevation as well as numerous lakes, glaciers, snowfields and extensive forests.

No highway crosses the range except at Teton Pass, where the Teton range joins the Snake river range. Only foot and bridle trails penetrate the backcountry. Much of the area, particularly the upper Teton country, is virgin mountain-forest.

Wildlife Refuge in Everglades Planned

Development of a new national park in Florida's tropical Everglades region is being expedited by the National Park service and the State of Florida. The Everglades, known as the last stand of the American crocodile, the roseate spoonbill and other valuable wildlife species, will be preserved in its primitive state as a wildlife refuge. Thousands of islands lie within the region, covered with dense vegetation ranging from giant cypress trees to royal palms. Indians still hunt for fox, bear, panther, deer and raccoon in this area. Crocodiles, alligators and numerous varieties of fish inhabit the waters. All this wildlife, however, is dominated by birds—gannets, curlews, ducks, herons, the "long white" egrets, the sand crane and the bald eagle.

The proposed park will cover 1,300,000 acres.

Rocky Mountain is a great hiker's and mountain climber's park, as are Grand Teton and Glacier, but it also offers the motorist one of the greatest thrills to be found in any national park. This is the Trail Ridge road, of which more than four miles are above 12,000 feet elevation and 11 miles are above the 11,000-foot timber line. From few places in the world is there offered such a far-flung panorama of spectacular mountain scenery.

Although the National Park service encourages mountain climbing in these and other parks of the system, its ranger force is called on year after year to go to the rescue of climbers who venture among the peaks alone or under unskilled guidance; and it is seldom that a season passes without one or more fatal accidents to those who disregard the safety rules which the service enjoins on all climbers. The fundamental piece of advice to the venturesome is: "If you want to climb, consult a ranger. Get his advice; and once you have it, abide by it. It may mean the difference between life and death."

IN GLACIER National park, there is almost every type of public accommodation. Concession operations in Rocky Mountain under contract with the government are limited, but at Estes park, on the east side, and Grand lake, on the west side, there are numerous hotels and camps just outside of the national park. At Grand Teton, there are no hotel, lodge or camp concessions, but there are varied accommodations in the town of Jackson and at many places in Jackson Hole.

MOUNTAIN PINNACLE . . . Jagged peaks and spectacular glaciers lure vacationers to Glacier National park in Montana. This imposing peak is Going-to-the-Sun mountain as seen from St. Mary lake.

THE recent death of Benny Leonard revives the old argument concerning the best lightweight from a long and able parade. No other ring division has sent out as many fine fighters. The list includes such boxers and punchers as Joe Gans, Benny Leonard, Jack McAuliffe, Frank Erne, Kid Lavigne—the Saginaw Kid, Bat Nelson, Ad Wolgast, Willie Ritchie, Freddy Welsh, Tony Canzoneri, Henry

B. Leonard

Armstrong and many others. In various debates and arguments that have been under way for 40 years, there are generally two names that finish out in front—Leonard and Gans.

Some time ago, Harry Smith, the veteran San Francisco expert who has been covering championship matches for more than 50 years, who goes back deep into ring history, put this selection up to many of those who had seen both men in action. In the vote that followed, Gans, the Old Master from Baltimore, had a slight lead. Both were rated headline artists as boxers and punchers. Leonard had much the better ring record. But Gans, to make a living, had to take orders more than once that included a dive.

He was the fighter Jack Blackburn, a great ringman on his own who once had charge of Joe Louis, picked as the best. But there are many others who rate Leonard on a par.

Gans finished his career in the last stages of tuberculosis, but even when a sick man he outlasted Bat Nelson, the Durable Dane. No one ever knew just how good Gans might have been under cleaner handling plus better health.

Both Boxer and Puncher

In addition to being a brilliant boxer, one who had no waste motion, he also was a murderous puncher. In his last fight with Nelson, when Gans was moving close to an early death, he nailed Nelson with a right to the side. "I thought Gans had used a knife," Nelson said later. "I never had a punch that hurt as much. I felt like crying."

Leonard was smart, game, one of the ablest of all the boxers and a hard puncher on the side. He was one of the greatest of the lot, and many rank him in front. And beyond that the game has known no one more willing to help any worthy cause, where he could be of use.

On the night before the Dempsey-Willard battle in Toledo, back in 1919, Bob Edgren and I dropped by to see Jess Willard. The 245-pound defending champion was more than willing to outline his plan of battle. "Look over Dempsey's record," he said. "A knockout in one round. Another knockout in two rounds. Two more in one round. You know what that means. It means he starts punching from the bell. You can't keep piling up one-round knockouts unless you pile in and start swinging. I'm going to wait for him with my left out and my right ready for an uppercut. The second he comes in close enough, I'll let him have it. And I don't believe any 187-pound guy can hurt me."

That had been Dempsey's earlier plan. Jack and Kearns had covered a bet, $10,000 against $100,000, on knocking Willard out in the first round. Naturally Dempsey didn't want to waste any time fooling around.

It was Leonard, a master mind in Dempsey's camp, who got Dempsey and Kearns to switch their plan.

"This big guy will be waiting for that first rush," Leonard said. "He's dangerous with that right-hand uppercut. There's no use taking any such chance against a fellow who outweighs you by 58 pounds. The thing to do is to make Willard lead first. Circle in and out, weaving and bobbing. And keep it up until he leads. Then go to work."

Strategic Stalling

This was wise advice. For something like 47 seconds, which seemed longer than 10 minutes, Dempsey circled Willard after the manner of a leopard moving around an ox. Dempsey would move in, weave, bob and then move back again. Around and around, with Willard shifting position, all set for the expected rush.

The time finally came when Willard couldn't wait any longer. After all, Willard was the champion and he had a 58-pound margin in weight, many inches in reach and five or six inches in height. As Dempsey started weaving in again, Willard tried a left jab. The tigerish Dempsey moved in under and nailed Willard with a hard right to the body, followed in a split-second flash with a killing left high on the cheekbone.

Willard fell like a giant marionette whose strings had snapped.

Later on, in the short fight, Willard jolted Dempsey badly with the same uppercut he had hoped to use in the first round. But, by that time, Willard was a helpless hulk.

This is merely further proof of Leonard's ring smartness. He always had most of the answers.

Utility Room Is Work Saver for Homemaker

This corridor-type utility room fits perfectly into a long narrow space off the kitchen. Work counter and sink can be used for processing garden produce. Clothes may be carried a few steps from the washer to outdoor lines.

Handiest room in the house is a first-floor utility room, according to the Rural Home Editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer. It is especially important for the farm woman who has carried baskets of wet clothes upstairs to hang out on the line.

"People planning new houses often automatically include such a room," she writes in the magazine read by 1,300,000 farm families. "Some are finding it possible to remodel a kitchen into 2 rooms—a smaller kitchen and a utility room. The room usually has an outdoor opening so it may be entered before going into the kitchen. "Equipped with running water, a sink or lavatory, storage cupboards, several electric outlets for washer, home freezer and other equipment, this room near the kitchen can be used in countless ways. With a sink, a hot plate and counter, all the preparations for home canning can be done there. Garden produce that is to be frozen may be carried right to the spot for processing and packaging. "Besides placing the washer and tubs where they are easily accessible to the yard, you can have the iron and board and ironer there."

Watch Beauty Care During Housecleaning

DON'T forget beauty care during housecleaning, Jean Gray advises homemakers in an article in nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer. "Too often good natures as well as rooms are upset by taking out rugs and moving furniture," she writes. "The family will be happier in the cleaning confusion if you remain unruffled and well groomed. And feeling neat will keep your spirits high as you attack the grime!

"Even though it may be old, your cleaning dress can be clean, neat and mended. Wear an apron or smock that can be whisked off to reveal a clean dress.

"Protect your skin from dirt by applying a powder base before starting to work. After dusty duties, wash vigorously with a turkish washcloth or complexion brush—this in addition to usual morning and evening washing.

"Benefit from the exercise of cleaning. When dusting and making beds, stretch your middle, keep it tense. This keeps muscles firm. When sweeping or running the vacuum, keep shoulders back and don't bend in the middle. Carrying your body straight and tall is slenderizing since much waist thickness is slumped. If you get tired, lie down for 15 minutes with your feet on a couple of pillows."

Home Comfort

Dining-room chairs appear in slip covers at the kitchen breakfast bar Mr. and Mrs. Harold Ford designed for their farm home in Pottawatomie county, Iowa. Betty Lindsay points out in nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer. These red water-proof plastic-coated fabric ones match leather-seat upholstery.

Comfort and convenience-promoting ideas abound in the Ford home. In each of the 10 years Mr. and Mrs. Ford have been married, they have made some improvements which will make farm work easier and the home more comfortable.

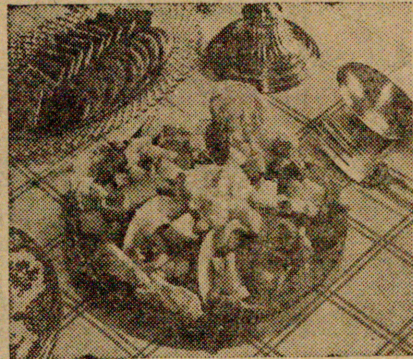

A busy homemaker who tends a large garden, prepares an abundance of food for freezing and canning and raises a large flock of chickens, Mrs. Ford manages to be a 4-H club leader, hold an office in the women's home project board and in a church society. Extra moments must be allotted for her flower garden, home improvement and personal care.

Human Eyes Sensitive
Human eyes are more sensitive to light than are photo-electric cells commonly called "electric eyes."

Here's Bright Salad For Dreary Days

A bright salad for dreary days is this combination of crisp apples and crunchy peanuts, writes Marjorie Griffin, Rural Home editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer.

"The family will enjoy helping themselves to the vitamin-packed treat served from a large bowl," she tells homemakers. "Or use individual salads for a pleasant change. For an appetizing touch garnish with peanuts and unpeeled slices of apples."

PEANUT WALDORF SALAD

1 c. apples, diced
1 c. celery, chopped
1/2 c. peanuts, chopped
2 tbsp. salad oil
1/2 tsp. tarragon vinegar
1/2 tsp. lemon juice
1/4 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. paprika
1/8 tsp. pepper

Combine the apples, celery and peanuts. Mix remaining ingredients together thoroughly by beating with rotary beater. Blend this with first mixture. Let stand in the refrigerator until chilled. Serve on lettuce or other salad green. Mayonnaise may be added if desired. Serves 4.

Good Laundering Keeps Bedding Fresh and Fragrant

NOTHING makes sleep more enjoyable than clean sheets and pillow cases, fluffy clean blankets and fragrant bed spreads, Georgia Leffingwell points out in nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer.

Listing home laundering methods that will insure fresh and fragrant bedding, she writes:

"Manufacturer's instructions give a washing machine's capacity. Be sure there's plenty of suds when washing a quilt, blanket or spread. Four to six sheets are a normal load, but a mixture of sheets and pillow cases gives better circulation and cleaner bedding."

Sheets and pillow cases, she adds, should be washed in water about 130 degrees F., with a rich, two inch suds. Let wash from 5 to 15 minutes, depending on how soiled the bedding is. Then give them a clear rinse and follow with a cool rinse.

Pinning on the clothesline from the corners or edges is an invitation to tearing, so fold sheets or pillow-cases from hem to hem with corners even. Hang a third to half over the line.

"Blankets and spreads need a bit more careful handling," she writes in the magazine read by 1,300,000 farm families. "Use lukewarm water and rich suds. 'Spots may be rubbed with two well-soaped fingers and blanket binding with a soft brush. Give them three rinses to remove every bit of soap. Keep the wringer loose."

"Dry the blankets or rayon colored spreads in the shade or on a line indoors away from direct heat or sunlight. Reverse them occasionally as they stop dripping to prevent sagging. Blot moisture with a towel as it collects. When dry, brush both sides of blanket with clean brush to bring up nap. Press the binding with warm iron."

DARK ROOM UNNECESSARY

Designed for photo fans who do not have a dark room, or who would like to spend the evening with the family, is a new "flash printer" with which prints can be made from negatives in the living room with all lights on. All the equipment necessary for printing can be operated on a small bridge table, the manufacturer reports.

LIKE THE MAIL

Operating on the theory that the "bread must go through," during the recent blizzard in Britain, deliveries were made by farm carts, sleds, and, in some cases, even by air. When a hamlet in the Docking area was cut off for five weeks by eight foot snow drifts which blocked the surrounding roads, bread was packed into sacks

WAR NICKEL PLAN ENDS

Government-owned nickel mining and processing facilities that were installed in Cuba at an approximate cost of $35,000,000 are being declared surplus by the RFC and will be assigned to WAA for disposal. The nickel plant is one of the largest industrial enterprises in Cuba.

WHITE FLOUR ENRICHMENT LAWS ARE ON INCREASE

Enactment of bills pending in state legislatures to require enrichment of white flour and white bread and rolls would bring the total of state laws up to the half way mark in the United States, according to the most recent survey of the progress of enrichment made by the Millers' National federation.

Kansas recently became the 21st state to enact an enrichment law which soon will go into effect.

"If this legislation is also enacted in Connecticut, Florida, and Pennsylvania," commented Herman Steen, vice president and executive secretary of the foundation, "real progress will have been made in a program to raise the level of national health."

Enrichment legislation which requires the addition of important quantities of vitamins and iron to white flour, bread, and rolls is supported by public health, medical, and nutrition authorities. While approximately 80 percent of flour is enriched voluntarily, state legislation is needed to effect uniformity both for interstate and intrastate commerce, as well as for nutritional reasons.

The Chinese cultivated wheat as early as 2700 B. C. and developed elaborate rituals to honor the important grain.

Frederick the Great considered bread so important in the provisioning of an army, that he recommended flour be stored in a fort from which the army was never more than five days march. Flour was transported to the field bakery under cavalry guard!

Classrooms in elementary schools throughout Chicago Motor Club territory in Indiana and Illinois are concentrating on the safety lesson pictorially summarized in this month's new poster, "Watch for Turning Cars," one of the winning drawings in a national poster contest for school children annually conducted by the Chicago Motor Club and its affiliated clubs. Written material supplementing the posters amplifies for the youngsters the time, places, and situations in which alertness is demanded to avoid serious injuries and traffic fatalities.

The Farmer

(Reprinted From the Republican, Hamilton, N. Y.)

A little while ago we heard Fred H. Sexauer, nationally known farm leader, say that back in 1800 it took the work of nine people to raise enough food-stuffs to feed ten people. This left one person to teach and preach and study methods whereby all would benefit through a higher standard of living. Those days, he said, were not far changed from biblical times.

Since 1800 there has been a great change and it has affected every one of us. Through the development and improvement in farm equipment which began with the invention of the reaper by McCormick in 1831, there have been greater crops grown with less and less labor until today we find three people can produce enough food to feed ten. This leaves seven persons to study more advanced methods to teach, to preach, and help us in improving our standard of living.

Changes continue today. Since 1910 with the help of farm equipment such as tractors and combines, power sowers, hay choppers, silo fillers and milking machines, fewer farmers have been able to feed more people. In fact, during the war period, we produced the greatest crops ever known to help feed a starving world, as well as our own nation.

"The farmer's dollar must be worth just as much as the dollar earned by the industrial worker."

There are some bad effects in the change that has taken place. Besides fewer farmers we are using fewer acres of land. In New York State since 1880, there are 70,000 fewer farmers growing greater crops on 5,000,000 less acres of improved land.

This means poor land is going into a discard, and we find this is true right in Central New York. The valley farms are producing more. Instead of 100 bushels of potatoes an acre the yields on nearby farms run as high as 450 bushels an acre. Power tractors, cultivators, sprayers and diggers do the work that used to be carried on by hand.

The land that has been abandoned is on our hill-tops where the late frosts in spring compete with the early frosts in the fall. The Federal government has taken over much of this land for reforestation. Even though attempts have been made to farm some of this land during the war period, it should be kept "out of circulation" and not produce mediocre crops to compete and bring down prices of farm products from the better areas.

There is one factor which touches every one of us. In the "horse and buggy" days enough produce was grown on the farm to practically keep the family. Supplies purchased included tea and coffee and sugar. And in the latter case maple syrup helped out.

Today the farmer is a specialist. He grows great crops, sells them for cash, and buys his supplies and equipment. He must receive a price for his products in line with his expenses, or we all suffer, for business gets very slow if the farmer has no money to spend.

Right now there is a serious depression in the Texas area where grapefruit is grown because there is such a large crop. Purchasing is down drastically. Everyone knows the farmer hasn't money to spend.

The answer to this is balanced prices. The farmer's dollar must be worth just as much as the dollar earned by the industrial worker.

These are some of the problems which go along with fewer farmers producing more food for more people. It will take a lot of thought to figure out the answer and have it satisfactory to all concerned.

OVER-65ERS LOSE

Qualified wage earners over 65 years of age in some instances have waited four or five years before filing their claims for benefits under the old-age and survivors insurance program, according to social security officials.

"Every case of failure to file claim when eligible was due to some misunderstanding about their right to receive benefits," it has been said. "The most frequent reason was the wage earner's impression that the payments in some way based on need. This is wholly untrue. No matter what a man's property, income, or other resources may be, he is entitled to his social security benefits if he is 65, has worked long enough under social security to qualify, and is no longer working at a job that comes under social security. He must file a claim, however, to receive the benefits."

WHY AUTO PREMIUMS ARE MORE

Here's why an increase in automobile insurance rates is necessary.

1. Bodily injury claim costs have risen as a result of a 30% increase in automobile accident deaths, rural accidents showing a 48% increase. Bodily injury claims are averaging 40% more than in 1941 because of loss of high wages and accelerated medical and hospitalization costs.

2. Property damages and collision claims are likewise mounting. Repair costs are up at least 35%, closely following the upward trend in general living costs. Wages of mechanics are high and repair parts are still scarce and costly.

3. Although 15 million of the 27 million cars on the road should be replaced with new autos, the 1946 output of new cars totals only about

2,200,000 with 5,000,000 expected in 1947. However, new cars are costing from 30 to 50% more than in 1941 so that many older cars will continue on the road, creating a serious hazard.

4. As evidence that old cars are not standing up, the American Automobile Association reports 17% more breakdowns.

5. The 18.7% increase in automobile thefts in 1945 was followed by a 15.5% additional increase in 1946.

6. With highways and streets in poor condition and with drivers operating older cars at faster speeds there is no immediate relief in sight, although insurance safety organizations are doing their utmost to check the rising accident trend.

Drive Carefully, Carry Insurance, Better be safe than sorry. Be careful where ever you see children and old people. Drive Slowly.

The executive board of the Methodist church WSCS met Tuesday evening in the church, last week.

The WSCS monthly meeting was held Wednesday afternoon last week in the church, with hostesses, Mrs. Henry Miller, Mrs. Walter Hamilton, and Mrs. Arvid Swanson, in charge.

The meeting opened with prayer led by Mrs. Frank Spath, and the business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Albert Schmuhl. A motion was made to hold the annual mother-daughter tea May 21 in the church dining room in the evening. Every member was asked to give a penny a day over and above their givings for missionary work. Devotions were led by Mrs. Herbert Duerr. The group was favored with a duet by Mrs. Duerr and Mrs. F. C. Cole, who sang "Teach Me to Pray." The guest speaker, Mrs. A. E. Blom-berg, a former missionary to India, gave an interesting talk on "The Lax of India." Hostesses served refreshments tray style. The next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Alexander Kennedy June 4 and the guests speaker for this meeting will be Mrs. Floyd Blewfield, president of the Joliet-Dixon district. Hostesses will be Mrs. Joseph Ingram, Mrs. Josephine Sayers, and Mrs. Walter White.

Dinner guests Friday night in the Leonard Anderson home were Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Walsh, and Mrs. Earl Schroeder and daughter.

A capacity crowd attended the mother-daughter banquet given Wednesday evening May 7 by the Woman's League of the Trinity Evangelical church. Long tables were covered with white linen. Centered on each table was the figure of a colonial girl on either side of which were clusters of orchid blossoms. Each table was done in one of three pastel shades, pink, green, and yellow. Nut cups were miniatures of the centerpiece; napkins and candles matched at each table. Glass table service was used throughout. Mrs. Thora Rydberg and her committee were in charge of the dining room. The men of the congregation served the banquet in cheflike attire climaxed with white caps and aprons. The dinner was served under the direction of Mrs. Cele Ruder. Pastor Reinke asked the blessing and served as toastmaster. The welcome to the daughters was given by Mrs. Ann Krog, league president. Miss Mitzi Weber, responded in behalf of the daughters present. A number of musical selections were presented by the girls' choir under the direction of Mrs. Aurelia Bruns, who in her capacity as program chairman, presented each guest with a copy of the program and menu, done in colors harmonizing with each table. During the banquet, two surprise awards were made to a mother and daughter. Mrs. Gertrude Jarchow received a gardenia corsage and Miss Barbara Boynton received a corsage of pink carnations. The banquet closed with prayer and was followed with moving pictures shown by Tony Padzuikas. This was the first mother-daughter banquet given by the church, and it was a huge success. *"Yes, sir!
Our new telephone's
a great help"*

PEOPLE who live in the country really need and appreciate good telephone service. We know that — and we're doing our best to provide more and better rural service as fast as possible.

We're building more lines . . . adding more equipment . . . in the rural areas we serve. At the present rate, we expect to complete in two years our goal of 21,000 installations — originally scheduled as a three-year job!

We're improving rural service, too! More customers have fewer rings of other parties on their lines. Last year over 5,000 magneto telephones were replaced with modern crankless instruments.

Soon thousands more families in Illinois Bell's rural territory will have modern, fast, efficient telephone service.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Industry Looks at Our Town

Maybe you read how a group of industrial experts have decided that the small town is the place for industry—not big cities. Reasons they give are better housing, pleasanter living, and more opportunity for wholesome recreation.

Well, looking around our town I'd say that was about right. Most of us own our homes, and keep them looking nice; we enjoy each other's company; and our recreations are mostly simple outdoor sports, and in the evening a mellow glass of beer with pleasant company.

As Doc Walters says, that sort of life just naturally sets you up for work the next day... whether it's in office, mill, or field. And Doc should know. He works fourteen hours, but never misses his morning "constitutional" or his evening glass of beer with friends.

From where I sit, any industry could profit from being in a town where wholesome living, temperance, and friendship are the rule.

HOME SHOW

A graphic exhibit dramatizing step-by-step the "hidden" features in good home construction of which the average home-owner is generally unaware, but which directly affect his pocket-book, will be one of the major educational displays at the Chicago home show, to be held at the Coliseum May 17 through 25.

Designed to show why some houses may have a long life and others deteriorate quickly, the exhibit is being prepared by the federal housing administration in cooperation with the Metropolitan Home Builders Association, which is sponsoring the first big postwar show dedicated to the home. Elements in good and lasting construction, according to William D. Sorgatz, chief architect of FHA, who is supervising the display, are often not subject to observation after the building is completed.

"Once the plaster is on the walls," he said, "it is too late to do anything about the hidden parts of a house. After a few years, the ceilings or the walls might come loose, and there will be leakage, rotting and general deterioration."

The display, which will consist of three full-size wall sections from different types of homes—brick, brick veneer, and frame—will graphically demonstrate why and how houses are braced, why insulation is vapor sealed, why cornerites are used, why framing is built free from chimneys and hundreds of other sound practices unseen in the finished structure.

"Each of these things," Mr. Sorgatz explained, "provides a part of the structural integrity of a home. Unsound building practices may not come out until it is too late to do anything about them."

The institutional display consists partly of sound building practices which have been developed over the centuries and partly of practices which have been developed by the FHA.

The display is one of several institutional exhibits which will be offered at the Home Show in the interest of better housing and more comfortable living. The Metropolitan Home Builders association will present an exhibit illustrating the history, progress, accomplishments and future objectives of home builders in the billion dollar building circle of which Chicago is the hub. It will show what housing has been built by private enterprise, what is now under construction, what plans are developing for the future, and where and how homes may be acquired for rental and purchase.

The home show will offer the greatest array of home materials, services, and products ever assembled under one roof. The feature exhibit will be a $10,000 "perfect" home, constructed in the Coliseum and utilizing the latest and fastest methods in home building. The home embraces all the "wish-we-hads" usually omitted from low and moderate cost housing, and is offered as an ideal home for the veteran who desires maximum comfort and spaciousness in a low-cost building unit.

Posters bearing the timely reminder "Be Extra Alert on Rainy Days" are being distributed by the Chicago Motor Club for March posting in 30,000 elementary school classrooms throughout its territory in Indiana and Illinois. Supplementary lesson sheets explain to the children the special traffic hazards of March's rainy weather—poorer visibility for both drivers and the child pedestrians, and the reduced control of cars on wet, slippery pavements.

Grapefruit Dessert
Bans 'Sugar Blues'

"Although we all join in the chorus of 'Sugar Blues' these days, you can change those blue notes to gay notes by serving grapefruit for dessert" the Country editor of nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer tells housewives.

"Nary a grain of sugar is used on this trio of grapefruit halves," she writes in the magazine read by 1,300,000 farm families.
"Topped with jams, jellies and preserves, they merrily sing out good eating. So strike up a new tune by having grapefruit for dessert."'Wish You Wouldn't's'
Apply to Parents, Too

SINCE turn about is fair play, any list of "Wish you Wouldn't's" for teen agers should be accompanied by a few "Don'ts" for parents, too, Holly Miller points out in nationally-circulated Capper's Farmer.

Discussing the teen agers' viewpoint, she writes:

"Seems as if 'I wish you wouldn't' is the preface to a good many statements by the older generation. 'The way you dress, eat, walk, talk — gadzooks — nothing seems to please them.'"

"But before you get too huffy and cast their admonitions to the breeze, go into a huddle with yourself. Down deep you may find the grace to admit that a lot of so-called characteristic adolescent behaviorisms are not calculated to make the populace love you. And that just because simply everybody acts a certain way is not sufficient reason for anybody as special as you to follow suit."

Among the "Don'ts" which Miss Miller says teen-agers might suggest to parents are:

"Don't laugh at us. We're self-conscious enough. Tho our plans may seem a little fantastic and some of our actions silly, it's probably part of being young. Don't you remember?"

"Don't treat us like kids. You can help us grow up by treating us like grown-ups. Trust us a little more. 'Never, never say, 'I told you so.' It's too curdling. And we have to learn the hard way to make it stick."
